interpreting services

K International's on-site Interpreters can converse in over 150 languages to groups or individually, ensuring information and messages are clearly understood by all. Depending on the context of the event, different interpreting services will be required.

Consecutive Interpreting

Also known as Liaison Interpreting, Ad-hoc Interpreting or Face-to-Face Interpreting, Consecutive Interpreting is suitable for small meetings or workshops, where time is not limited. During conversation the speaker is asked to pause every few sentences to allow the interpreter to render what was said into the target language required.

Whispering

Appropriate for events or meetings where there may only be one or two attendees that do not speak the majority language. Our interpreter would sit beside the delegate/s and interpret through 'whispers' as not to disturb the rest of the group.

Simultaneous Interpreting

Ideal for large, multi-language conferences or exhibitions where many participants require interpretation in various languages.

A highly specialised service, the interpreter works within a soundproof booth, listening through headphones to the speaker. They are able to almost instantly translate into the target language, while simultaneously listening to and comprehending the next sentence. K International is also able to supply and set up the equipment required for this service.

If you are not sure which service you require, or you'd just like some advice on using an interpreter, give us a call on 01908 572600, contact us at info@k-international.com. You can also visit our online guide to interpreting services at www.k-international.com/interpreting.
